Dear Parents and Staff,

We are writing to keep you all updated with the news about schools opening on Monday.

As you have probably heard on the news, the NEU (England's largest teaching union) has advised its members of their "legal right" not to return to their classrooms next week amid serious health and safety fears.

The NAHT (headteachers' union) has initiated a legal challenge to the government's decision to reopen schools next week.

We are currently communicating with staff to see which staff will make the decision to work from home and which staff will be in school for the school to re-open tomorrow.

We are sharing this with you so that you have the opportunity to make plans in case there are any changes made to next week's school arrangements. This may or may not end up being the case.

Please be aware that we don't have the full picture at the moment but I sincerely hope we are able to return to school as planned.

We will keep families updated as soon and as best as we can. It is important to remember though as of now (Sunday 3rd Jan) all children at our school are expected to return on Monday 4th January. If this is not the case we will contact individual families that are affected with further information. If your child's class teacher informs us that they will not be coming into school to teach their class we are aiming, if possible, to continue to provide in school education to children whose parents are key workers and those children who are considered vulnerable. With this in mind please could you contact school as soon as possible via the school email sandilprimary@ecmtrust.co.uk and tell us if you are currently working within one of the areas set out below:
